Actually there is not much to say about the recent trading-performance, however analysing the pattern in February and in March – we see similarities. On up-days we have strong volume and strong momentum and then the stock settles back with low volume and dying momentum. But the message of this – the buyers are not selling out – they are keeping the stock (therefore low down-volume) however are bidding on the low side with small bid volume. The stock is wedged between the 14 and 50 days moving average. Whoever is or has been responsible for the overhang around the 0.15 level did not do himself a favour as the ask side was too obvious not to be seen and therefore kept potential traders away. In the meantime, one can accumulate at fire sale prices and why should one complain about such a discount? Conclusion: Once the supply around the 0.15 is gone, the next wave will be strongly up.
